

of historic note

March, APEX Museum

This exhibition celebrates the political, social, cultural contributions of a dozen African American women in Atlanta. In doing so, it seeks to highlight their voices and achievements, refocusing our attention on their vital roles in the fight for equality and justice and their lasting impact on the civil rights and feminist movements.

Created as part of a class on visual culture, the process of designing this exhibition enabled students to think critically about the dominant selection and framing of images and stories in popular historical narratives. In the collection of posters, students capture their learning from the fascinating stories these women, highlighting their significance and relevance to contemporary audiences.

*Nassim JafariNaimi, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Digital Media, Georgia Tech*

In the process of designing and critiquing, it was as if we were having a conversation with these extra-ordinary women. These posters are a visual reflection of our collective conversation: we invite you to join in!

*Horyun Song, MS-HCI
Teaching Assistant, Georgia Tech*

*With special thanks to our partners and friends,
Mr. Dan Moore, Ms. Lauren Tate Baeza, Ms. Ivy Knight,
Ms. Pamela Pryor, Brooke Bosley and Tae Eun Kim
for their support and inspiration throughout this journey.*

